Romance in a Gypsy Camp

LENGTH, 725 FEET.

COPYRIGHT 1908

The son of a wealthy Southern planter becomes attached to a fast set of young men. Spending his money like water. Turning night into day.

When after one of his escapades, he importunes his parents for more "change" his father's patience ceases and he is ordered out. As he turns from the old home he strikes off resolutely to seek new life in other surroundings.

Pausing by the side of a stream to cool his aching head—a gypsy girl of rare charms comes to fill her jug. It is a case of love at first sight. The couple leave together for the camp.

Seeing the attentions of the Southerner one of the gypsy girl's admirers orders him away, which order is disregarded. A fierce fight ensues—the young man is beaten to insensibility by the gypsy and his friends.

Hovering between life and death for days, he is attended to by the gypsy girl. When he is momentarily left alone, the rival, who has been waiting for this, creeps cat-like by his side, seizes him by the hair and is about to sever his head as the girl steps in and stabs him to death. The parents and fiance of the young man have meantime been appraised of the son's whereabouts and injury, and arrive at the camp. The Southern girl flies to the young man's arms. As if struck by a thunderbolt the gypsy girl pauses spellbound—her heart breaks—and in one fell moment she has plunged a dagger into her heart.

NO. 73

The Old Maid's Parrot.

LENGTH, 250 FEET

COPYRIGHT 1908

While Polly is alone on the porch a dog gets her by the neck and runs away with her.

The old maid and her company are in hot pursuit after the thief and at last catch him. Polly is saved to the great delight of the old maids.

A picture full of fun and animation.

MANUFACTURER OF

S. Lubin TRADE MARK REG. COPYRIGHTED.

Life Motion Picture Machines, Films, Slides and Stereopticons

Lubin Building, 926-928 Market St., Phila., Pa.

2500 8-06

NO. 72